

WOLSEY LODGES

Treverbyn Vean Manor

This listed, neo-Gothic manor house is of great architectural and historical importance. During the war it was acquired by Lord Beaverbrook who met here with Churchill and Montgomery when devising their war plans. The house stands high above the beautiful wooded Glynn valley, enjoying peace and tranquillity of pine woodlands bordered by the rivers Fowey and Loveny. Enjoy walking past our lake and alongside the riverside in our beautiful 40 acre woodland.

The unique combination of work by architects George Gilbert Scott and William Burges, has created a breathtaking and yet fabulously welcoming home. Guests are offered a Cornish cream tea in the Great Hall with its minstrel's gallery, log fire and stone mullion windows and the elegant dining room and sitting room with elaborate ceilings are also for guests to enjoy. On warm evenings, drinks are served on the long terrace overlooking the woods or in the hall.

Feel totally pampered in large, comfortable, centrally heated bedrooms with views through leaded windows and glorious en suite bathrooms with Victorian roll top baths and many original features.

Your Hosts

Anthony and Carolyn are kindness itself, both accomplished chefs who love their guests to eat well, using produce from their daughter's organic garden and fresh sea food caught locally. Anthony is a member of Lanhydrock golf club and is happy to arrange a round of golf. Carolyn is an amateur artist, passionate about gardens and will help you plan your stay, just ask.

The Location

Gardens including nearby Eden and Heligan: houses such as Lanhydrock, Cotehele and Prideaux Place; restaurants; beautiful coastal walks; secluded beaches; antique centres; Bodmin Moor: all of Cornwall is within easy reach from here.

Finding Us

From M5 take A38 passing Liskeard, through Dobwalls, onto the Bodmin road through Doublebois. After 1 mile turn right at St Neot sign & then turn immediately in front of the cottages to the lodge gate on the right. Go past the grey Victorian lodge and stables, up the wooded drive to the house.
